

GRACIE HOME AGAIN —WITH HUSBAND

Gracie Fields, accompanied by her husband, Boris Alperovic, on arrival at Victoria Station last night. She will appear at Monday's midnight matinee at the London Coliseum in aid of the Lynmouth flood disaster fund.

BORIS IS HERE TO HOLD HER HAND

Herald Reporter

INTO London from Capri last night came Mr. and Mrs. Boris Alperovic. Mr. Alperovic is Rumanian-born. Mrs. Alperovic is better known as Gracie Fields.

It was her first visit to Britain for 11 months. It was her husband's first visit.

Said Gracie, here for five days: "Boris is the greatest fellow I've ever known. Of course I could not leave him behind. I need him to hold my hand."

Boris, an inch taller than Gracie, grinned: "What do I want to see first in London?—The sights?—No, my new family," he said.

Then he shook hands with some of Gracie's relatives there to meet them.

Gracie has travelled from

Capri specially to sing at a midnight matinee at the Coliseum on Monday night, in aid of the Lynmouth Fund.

Asked about ex-King Farouk's visits to her luxury restaurant and swimming pool on Capri, Gracie said, "Farouk's all right. He's a customer of mine. He has never swum in my pool. He prefers the sea."
