

'Ridicoloos'

FROM her sunshiny Capri villa, GRACIE FIELDS cables me to deny American reports that she is selling the villa to EDDA CIANO, who would turn it into a night club or gambling joint.

RIDICOLOOS NONSENSE.
REGARDS—GRACIE.

P.O. repetition "Ridicoloos."

Our own Gracie

As for Gracie, our one and only Gracie, she is perhaps more near to herself on or off the stage. This picture I took of her is almost a snapshot, yet it is so characteristic, so typically her. In spite of all the trouble she has been through she still looks a young and wonderfully fit woman.

And Chico Marx? Off the stage he is not the jester you see here—not the fey clown that the world knows but a shrewd business man and I believe a pretty good bridge player to boot.

Balou

"Here's a picture of Gracie Fields that has not been seen before. Lovable Gracie!—just as much at home in front of the mike as she is on the stage. She seems able to bring her homely personality—sometimes pathetic, sometimes comic—through any medium, except perhaps that of the cinema."
